BAD MONEY AND ITS MAKERS

Wonderful Skill Displayed in Counterfeiting.

HIEF WILKIE'S rooms in the Treasury building contain all kinds of counterfelt money, photographs of counterfeiters, tools with which some of the work was done, dangerous-looking weapons-pistols dirks. knives-with which the counterfeiters endeavored to avoid arrest, and many other things of like character. These have been collected from time to time since the establishment of the Bureau, and vol-

Crafty Mand Elrodd.

Maud Elrodd, whose photograph shows her as being a not bad looking brunette, was the most notorious crook and counever troubled the Secret Service men. She was a native of Missouri, and added to her accomplishments as a horse thief, robber, and all-round crook, that of counterfeiting. When finally caught at the latter she managed to borrow a young haby, which she claimed as her own, and her motherly devotions were such as to win the jury, and she was acquitted. Negroes, Italians, and Chinese are the most numerous counterfeiters of coins, but their workings give the department comparatively little trouble when com-pared to having well executed bank notes bobbing up in different sections of the country, causing consternation among bankers and business men. These are the ones which cause Secret Service men to have sleepless nights, and to spend weeks, months, and even years, in shad-

It was in June, 1867, that it was discovered that duplicate numbers appeared on many of the 7.20 one-thousand-dollar United States bonds which had been re-

The Counterfeiters Caught.

The Treasury Department was greatly plarmed and offered a reward of $25,000 for the arrest of the counterfelter and the recovery of the plates. Chief Woods was told that the reward applied to his office as well as to outside detectives. It was not long before Chief Woods had Brockaway, John R. Doyle Charles Ulrich and Charles Smith rounded up, recovering the

The Government had a long and expensive suit at law in the United States cour at New York against the bankers who had obtained good money from the Treasury on the spurious 7.30 one-thousand-dollar bonds. After a bitter fight the Government succeeded in recovering nearly or quite $100,000, which was reluctantly yielded up by the bankers who had been Colonel Woods never did get his reward although he resigned as chief of the Secret Service in order to give all his time to running down and convicting the counterfeiters. Metallurgist experts, chosen by Comptroller Porter, testified positively that the plates were copper electro-plates, the product of the electric battery obtained from matrices, thus backing up Colonel Woods' assertion.

Skillfulest of Crooks.

The men mixed up in that 7:30 bond counterfeiting gave the Government more trouble than any band of counterfeiters ever captured, unless possibly the John-

Ulrich learning his trade in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and, being thoroughly familiar with the arts and methods of money-making, he executed his counterfeits so well that they were thoroughly in circulation before they were discovered to be bogus. He served ere simply perfect.

Brockaway was not an expert at any thing in the counterfeiting line save as a safe and shrewd placer of spurious stuff where returns of the genuine would be safe and quick. However, he could de-tect by touch good from spurious money. In placing his money he never took desperate chances, except for very large sums, and he always worked his plans in such a way as to completely throw off

Broker for the Gang.

Doyle was a resident of Chicago and was the broker for the lay-out; Smith's home was in New York city; Brockaway lived next door to the chief of the Brook lyn police, and Utrich was a kind of a bird of passage, having no permanent place of abode. Smith would get off the notes, generally of the denomination of $100, and deliver them to Brockaway, who would go to Beston, Philadelphia, or some other city and deposit in some bank in the establishment of the Bureau, and volumes could be written about their histories.

One of the most perfect hand-executed counterfeit bills was made by a green Georgia farmer named W. C. Bonnell, being a composition of six shinplasters, Confederate money, and a section of a one-dollar genuine greenback. These are so ingeniously wrought together as to make a seemingly perfect ten-dollar manufacture was recovered, they being too shrewd to have it on their persons.

The business was commenced in the spring of 1777, and continued for more than two years, to the great discredit of the Con-tinental currency, Congress being forced to call in its emissions most counterfeit-ed and urged the States to provide a sinking fund by raising $15,000,000 in the year 1779, and $6,000,000 annually for cighteen years. Big Phillips Brooks.

At the height of the busy holiday season, only a few days before Christman some years ago, a large man stopped at a counter in one of the big stores in Boston to make a purchase. As he stood waiting for his parcel in the bustling, hurrying crowd, above which he towered head and shoulders, a poorly dressed little girl came wandering by, crying bitterly. Turning quickly, the tall man stooped mere than one term in Sing Sing, and down a 1 asked her what the trouble was. "I've lost my mamma, and I can't find The Tramways of London.

Since the London county council took o buying and managing their own tramcars they have materially assisted the taxpayers with the profits therefrom. The report for the workings of the municipal rams for the past twelve months shows that the "rates," as local taxes are generally called in England, have been "assisted" to the extent of $345,000 by the profits of the past year an advance of $145,000 over the assistance given from the same source during the previous twelve-menth. At present the London county council, which is made up of dele-gates from all sections of the great netropolis, and legislators on matters which are of greater scope than mere dis-trict questions, owns all the tram lines on the north (or Strand side of the Thames, and those on the south (or Surry) side as well. The latter they op-erate with a complete staff of their own officers and employes, but the northern lines are at present leased to several a trifle over $375,000 a year.-Exchange.

THE CAMELOTS OF PARIS.

Ingenuity of the Street Hawkers of the French Metropolis.

The Paris "camelot," or street hawker, is the most ingenious creature for turning an honest-or even a dishonest-penny. His chief is a man named Hayard, who is known as the "Empereur des Camelots," and who keeps a shop in the Rue de Croissant, a side street of the Rue de Montmartre, the Fleet Street of Paris. Hayard will for a few hundred francs produce to order an outburst of popular enthusiasm for any cause. Royalist, Monarchist, or Republican, anti-Semitic, Dreyfusard, or anti-Dreyfusard; it is a matter of indifference to him and his men. "Vive" this or "A bas" that is shouled with vigor, provided the cash is the usual price, but if the cause for which they have to shout is one that can bring the manifestants into collision with the po-lice, the price varies between 2 and 5 francs, medical aid and legal assistance being also guaranteed. It is at such times as a royal visit that Hayard reaps a golden harvest. The morning after the announcement of the arrival of Nicholas If he had half a dozen presses going printing off patriotic verses set to popular tunes, which the "camelots" sell by thousands in every part of the city. Hayard, aided by a rickety piano, teaches them the melody in batches of twenty or thirty in the courtyard behind the shop.— London Graphic.

A LINE TO POOR MEN: Do you realize that this is the hardest part of the year to provide for your families, and every dollar saved means twenty loaves of bread? The only way you can twenty loaves of bread? The only way you can do it is to come to the workingman's friend and get a tailor-made evercoat or suit of clothes (slightly used), of woolien goods, at prices to suit the dull times.
